There is a money scam in Christianity involving tithing to God. After all, no one wants to be cursed by God. By playing on emotions and bible ignorance, prosperity preachers use tithing to get rich.”

Edward G. Palmer

Religious Greed Unveiled," author Edward G. Palmer pulls back the curtain on a controversial topic that has long been shrouded in secrecy within the realms of Christianity. The book sheds light on the money scam involving tithing to God, revealing the manipulation tactics used by prosperity ministers to enrich themselves at the expense of sincere believers.

With a critical eye on the misuse of the tithe as a tool of fear and control, the author challenges the status quo and questions the true intentions behind the emphasis on tithing in many churches. The book draws on scripture and historical contexts. It delves into the misrepresented teachings that have led many astray, emphasizing the importance of understanding the essence of giving in a spiritual context.

"God And Tithing: Religious Greed Unveiled" offers readers a unique and thought-provoking journey to uncover the truth about biblical-based tithing. By exploring the teachings of Jesus and Paul on generosity and stewardship, the book encourages a deeper reflection on one's faith practices and the motivations behind financial contributions to religious institutions.

Whether you are a devoted church member seeking clarity on tithing practices or simply curious about the intersection of faith and finances, this book promises to challenge preconceived notions and spark meaningful conversations about the true essence of giving in the context of God's teachings.

For those ready to confront the uncomfortable truths about the manipulation of tithing in religious settings, "God And Tithing: Religious Greed Unveiled" is a compelling must-read that will ignite reflection, stimulate conversation, and inspire a renewed commitment to authentic spiritual values.
